3. Significance

The city of Barcelona houses a major seaport which lies 150 kilometres south of the French border. It is a major Mediterranean port and is a popular commercial centre which is known for its individuality and beauty. Hans Christian Andersen once commented that Barcelona was the 'Paris of Spain'. In addition to this, Barcelona is undoubtedly a major cultural centre and has a remarkable history to its credit. There are myriads of libraries, museums and buildings in the city which exemplify modernist and art Nouveau décor.

4. History

The origin of the earliest settlement is still uncertain and therefore it is a little difficult to ascertain when the city actually came into being. The founding of this city is subject to two different legends wherein the first legend states that the city owes its foundation to the mythological Hercules. Whereas the second one denotes that the city was founded with the historical Carthaginian general, Hamilcar Barca. For both the legends, there is no historical or linguistic evidence to support the claims. In 15 BC, the city was under the Romans and had a colonial name 'Faventia' which is precisely the short form of the original name itself. During the same era, the city had its own currency in the form of coins wherein there were some from the era of Galba.

5. Cultural identity

Being the Capital of Catalonia, Barcelona is endowed with a unique culture and its history has left a heavy influence on the present culture of the city. The culture of this city has developed its own identity over the centuries. The capacity to absorb different influences and the tolerance values have shaped a culture which is cosmopolitan and national at the same time. As a result of country's geographical location, art and thought have been a part of the catalonia from a long time. The Catalan arts have always exemplified the universal vocation and there have been legends who have immense contribution in shaping the cultural identity of this city. Catalonia has always been an intersection of different cultures and influences and painting and architecture have formed an integral part of Catalan identity.

7.1.1. Monastery of Pedralbes

Deemed as one of the most stunning buildings of the Catalan Gothic in Barcelona, the building showcases religious art from the 14th to the 20th century. Founded by Queen Elisenda de Montcada, the construction of the monastery started in the year 1326 and is a fine example of homogeneous Gothic architecture in Catalonia. The 3-storey cloister and the park which are situated inside the monastery are the main highlights of this place.

7.1.3. Camp Nou

Home to the FC Barcelona, Estadio Camp Nou was built between the years of 1954 and 1957. The stadium's capacity has been flickering over time and decreased to 99,354, but it still is the largest stadium in Spain. Even though the football matches rope in a huge crowd, the stadium is used for other purposes as well. This venue is well-known for Pope John Paul's declaration as an honorary citizen of Barcelona, U2's first performance and the legendary Michael Jackson's appearance on one of his tours.

7.1.4. Park Güell

Being a UNESCO World Heritage Site, Park Güell is considered as one of Gaudi's most artistic works. Situated on the top of Carmel Hill, visitors need to go through a long uphill walk in order to view this beauty or they can hire a taxi for the same. Originally, the park was going to be converted into a residential garden village consisting of around 60 houses. But this plan did not materialize and eventually, Guelli's family donated this park to the city, making it public.

7.1.5. Museu de Zoologia

Situated in the Parc de Ciutadella, this building is known as the Catell dels tres dragons which translates to 'Castle of Three Dragons'. The reason behind such a name is that the building consists of 3 towers and the structure houses an extensive collection showing exhibits of amphibians, mammals, fish and reptiles. The collection of the zoo is used for research and teaching and the bird's eggs and shells displayed here are quite interesting. There are stuffed animals arranged into life-like poses, a huge impressive whale skeleton and a library of animal sounds, which is a favorite among children.

7.1.8. Museu Nacional d'Art de Catalunya

Situated on the slopes of Montjuïc, the museum was built to accommodate the world exhibition, which took place in 1929. After that, the structure was restored during the year of 2005 and now the collection is mostly Catalan art spanning across the period of the early middle ages and 20th century. However, the highpoint here is the Romanesque art section, which is arguably the most imperative concentration of medieval art in the world. The collection also includes the neglected frescoes that were left to be ignored in the country churches around the early 20th century. A total of 21 frescoes, some woodcarvings, and painted altar frontals are on display here.

7.1.9. Casa Batlló

Considered as one of the masterpieces of Antoni Gaudí, Casa Batlló was remodelled in the 19th century and is a stunning piece of architecture. With a fairy-tale exterior, the interior of the building is just as mystical. Located in the center of the city, the building was originally constructed in 1877 and redesigned in the year of 1904 by Gaudí himself. Thereafter, it has been refurbished repeatedly, with the contribution of Gaudí's assistants to the renovation. The ground floor of the building has irregular oval windows with sculpted stonework, whereas the roof of the building is arched and resembles the back of a dragon.

7.1.10. Casa Milà

The last civil work of Antony Gaudí, Casa Milà was built between the years 1906 and 1912 and is reckoned as one of the most eccentric creations of the famous architect. Popularly known as La Pedrera, the building was originally built for the married couple, Roser Segimon and Pera Mila which they sold off in the year 1940 after the death of Pera Mila. The roof of the building is one of the most striking features and is crowned with skylights, staircase exits and fans. There is not even a single straight edge if you take a look at the exterior of this masterpiece and it continues towards the interior which gives a peculiar look to the structure.

7.1.11. Palau de la Música Catalana

The most renowned concert hall in the city of Barcelona, Palau de la musica Catalana is designed in the Catalan Modernists style by the famous architect, Lluís Domènech i Montaner. Constructed between the year of 1905 and 1908, the concert hall can accommodate around 2,200 people and is illuminated only with natural light throughout the day. As the auditorium was commissioned by a choral society, its dominant theme is choral music which is clearly visible in the décor of the hall as well.

7.1.12. Basilica of Santa Maria del Mar

An excellent example of Catalan Gothic, Basilica of Santa Maria del Mar has a very distinctive style and was built between 1329 and 1383 at the pinnacle of Catalonia's maritime. The interior is in complete contrast with the exterior giving an impression of light and spaciousness and is a little different from other Gothic churches in the city, as it is completely devoid of imagery. The church seems like a fortress with its monumental towers.

Conclusion – Why to select this destination

A city like Barcelona has plenty to offer in terms of food, festivals, adventures and events. It becomes a little difficult to absorb all of it in a single go. Starting with the culture of the city, it is an understatement to say that the cultural aspects of this city are simply overwhelming. The residents of Barcelona celebrate festivals with a lot of passion and there are plenty of festivals every single month. In fact, throughout the year, the festivals carry on with all the fun and frolic. As there are festivals evenly spread out through the year, a lot of people visit this part of Spain to celebrate these festivals. The native people here love celebrating these festivals and participate with all the zeal and fervour. Talking about the food in Barcelona, it is simply a pleasure to taste the cuisines here. This city houses some of the best restaurants in the entire world. Madrilenos consider food as an art and this is clearly evident from their preparation and the level of seriousness they have when it comes to food. The delicacies here are mouth-watering and every upscale restaurant is famous for a speciality or two. There is just no limit to the love people here have for their food. The Mediterranean cuisine and the kind of sea food offered in Barcelona is simply unparalleled. From football to food, Barcelona has a charm of its own and it is unique in one aspect or the other. Partly because, Spain has been through such a glorious time in the history and as different people governed the country, all of them left an indelible mark on the country which has led to a diverse culture and a unique history. But to be specific about Barcelona, it has so much to offer different kinds of travellers or tourists. Barcelona, has so many churches and parks and the buildings here are simply incredible. Thanks to Antoni Gaudi, his works are a piece and as the buildings are spread all over the city, they have rendered this city with colourful and some intricate architecture at the same time. All in all, it is simply a joyride to visit this part of the country and it is sure to be an experience of a lifetime for many.
