3. Significance

Rochester, New York is home to numerous cultural institutions including the George Eastman House International Museum of Photography and Film, Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra, Strong National Museum of Play, Memorial Art Gallery, the Garth Fagan Dance, Rochester Contemporary Art Center among many other arts organizations. Established in 1969, the National Museum of Play has numerous collections and is the only Collection based museum in the nation devoted primarily to the study of play. Though it is a History Museum, it also has interactive and hands on characteristics of a children's museum thus becoming United States' second largest museum of that type. The exhibits in the museum interpret the key elements of play. Guests are able to explore the worlds of the Berenstain Bears and Sesame Street. The museum's exhibits are mainly themed for storybooks, video games, nature, comic books, children lifestyles, history, television shows, and education. The National Toy Hall of Fame can also be found at the museum. Founded in 1922, the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra serves more than 150, 000 people annually through education, community engagement activities, concerts and ticketed events in schools and community centers across the region. It is also a leader in music education throughout the nation. The first public parks in Rochester, New York, were designed by the famed landscaper Frederick Law. They include the Highland Park, Genesee Valley Park, Maplewood Park, and the Seneca Park. Each of these parks remains a popular destination for both locals and visitors from other parts of the nation. Visitors are also drawn to Rochester, New York by the different festivals that take place in the city. Rochester's renowned festival season starts as soon as May rolls around and the snow becomes less likely. From May through October, there is, at least, a festival on every weekend going on in Rochester. All these festivals focus on diverse subjects such as crafts, music, horticulture and food. Admission is usually free for most of these festivals. The Lilac Festival draws visitors from town to the Highland Park. Other festivals include the Rochester International Jazz Festival, Park Avenue Fest, the Film Festival, the Roc City Rib Fest among many others. There are many cultural festivals that takes place around the city as well as the local areas including Turkish and Greek Festivals. There are three major trails (multi- use) passing through the Rochester Area all meeting up at Genesee Valley Park. These are Erie Canalway Trail, the Genesee Valley Greenway, and the Genesee Riverway Trail.

4. History

Rochester initially belonged to the Seneca tribe till 1797 when they gave up the land in the Treaty of Big Tree. This tribe then vanished from Rochester. Rochester began to modernize after the defeat of Great Britain. Rochester was first known as the "Young Lion of the West" and later as the "Flour City". This city was one of the largest flour producing cities in USA. Rochester was also dominated by ethnocultural politics wherein two rival groups fought for power. In 1821, Monroe County was formed out of parts of Ontario and Genesee countries, and hence Rochesterville was formed. Rochester was founded in a short span of time after the American Revolution by a wave of English-Puritan deteriorates immigrants from New England who were looking for new agricultural land. They will also be the dominant group in Rochester, New York for over a long time or century. Let's briefly discuss Rochester's development that followed the American Revolution and they were forced relinquishment of their terrain by the Iroquois after the defeat of Great Britain they allied with the British and the four major Iroquois were essentially forced from New York, and they were also given a large land grant on the Grand River in Canada. In the years leading up to the Civil War, various locations in Rochester were used as a safe house to shelter fugitive slaves. The period after the Civil War saw Rochester grow almost four times in number.

5. Cultural identity

Rochester is rich in cultural and recreational activities. There are a number of cultural institutions you will find here. The most popular include the Garth Fagan Dance, Museum of Photography and Film, Rochester Museum & Science Center, the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra, George Eastman House International Memorial Art Gallery, Hochstein School of Music & Dance, Rochester Contemporary Art Center, the Rochester Broadway Theater League, Strong National Museum of Play, the Strasenburgh Planetarium, and the Auditorium Theater among many others. The Geva Theater is the largest theater in this city. Also every First Friday of each month, all members of the Rochester Art Community open their doors for everyone to have a behind the scenes look at various galleries and studios. There are various activities like public art on city streets and dance and theatre which keeps the city teeming with cultural abundance.

6. Natural resources

Like any other city, Rochester too is facing problems with the environment. In order to preserve the natural resources from running out, this city has introduced various 'go green' initiatives. The city has introduced a number of campaigns in order to help protect the resources that seem to be decreasing rapidly. The city is striving hard to protect resources such as fertile soil which is why they introduced a farmer's scheme where experts come in and help farmers understand how to use their land in the best possible way to yield more crop and protect the fertility of the soil. This campaign also helps increase the produce of things the city is most famous for which includes maple syrup, oats, potatoes, soybeans and wheat. Other activities such as mining and livestock too have been given attention in order to ensure the resources are being used in the right manner.

7.2.3. High Falls

Settlers in the area were attracted to this majestic High Fall of the Genesee in the first place. The High Fall is a 96-foot waterfall at the center of downtown, and you can view it best from the old Pont de Rennes pedestrian bridge. You can also take a walk around the old warehouses, on the west bank between the falls and the bridge. This is the area referred to as the High Falls. There is a small museum/visitor center as well as some old milling equipment around this area. Seen here as they appeared in April 1898, the roaring waters of High Falls have captured the imaginations of Rochesterians for generations. The 96-foot falls also played an instrumental role in shaping Rochester's history, the wellspring around which the City came of age. The spectacular sight of the falls inspired many explorers of the Genesee Valley. More than just a picturesque natural phenomenon, the High Falls beckoned to early settlers as a source of raw energy. Beyond the museum, of course, lie the falls themselves, still enchanting Rochesterians after all these years. A tour of High Falls and Brown's Race features a panoramic view of the Genesee River's 96-foot waterfall and spectacular gorge and a visit to an urban cultural park that celebrates Rochester's earliest industrial area started during the Flour City era. Walk: out onto the bridge and look right (south) toward downtown for one of Rochester's most spectacular sights: the Genesee River Gorge and the High Falls. The Pont de Rennes pedestrian bridge and park were created in 1982 from what was the Platt Street bridge (1891), an 858-foot-long, truss bridge. See the Genesee River rushing over a 96-foot cliff. Walk through Rochester's past, and future. Learn all about the famous people who have lived in Rochester. Spend a relaxing afternoon in the park at Granite Mills Commons or on the 858-foot long Pont De Rennes bridge. Stand in Triphammer Forge and see actual 1816 factory ruins. Walk across historic footbridges and peek beneath the street at a replicated 240-foot section of the original raceway used to power mill wheels.

7.2.14. Corbett's Glen Nature Park

Once a privately-owned park, Corbett's Glen was such a premier attraction for the Rochester area, its picturesque landscape is immortalized in postcards and the memories of the locals. Even when devastated by pollution and threatened by surrounding development, the Allens Creek Valley, in which the Glen lies, continued to be a draw for scenic walks, family picnics, and photography. Hidden away in the development-packed Rochester suburb of Penfield, the Glen continues to serve as a small slice of nature for the community to enjoy. The pebble-lined Allens Creek enters the park as visitors do, through the vaulted stone arch of the railway bridge. It is this tunnel that gives visitors a feeling of entering another world; one that really shouldn't be here, as they leave the busy expressways and business complexes above, and follow Allens Creek as it winds around glacial formations and drops over several small frothy cascades. Tunnel Falls, lying just as the creek emerges from beneath the vine-covered stone of the rail bridge, is the first of many lovely scenes that is remembered long after leaving. Two additional cascades, although small in size, shake up the creek and provide a little excitement in this otherwise serene landscape. In addition to the three cascades, the southern part of the park carries hikers around rolling glacial moraines left from the last ice age, wetland marsh that is as saturated with wildlife as it is with water, and a wind-swept meadow in the heart of it all. A favorite pastime of mine is to sit on the lone bench in the middle of the meadow with a pair of binoculars and a field guide and try to identify the various resident and migrating birds that fly by. Being an oasis of green within an urban jungle, migrating birds often use the valley as a stop-over on their long journeys. Over 100 species have been spotted here. The trails here are well-maintained and spotting local wildlife is unavoidable.

12. Transportation hubs

Major airports, train stations (hubs), ports, bus station. The Greater Rochester International Airport is the main airport for all international flights to Rochester NY. The distance from The Greater Rochester International Airport to downtown Rochester is 10kms which requires 11 minutes. If you're planning on visiting this city, try to get a direct flight here. This airport is situated around three miles to the southwest of Rochester Monroe County. Regional Transit Service, New York Trailways and Rochester Genesee are the main bus stations in Rochester. Bus transport is cheap and safe. You can also visit multiple cities in NY using the bus services this city has to offer. These days you can book bus services online and visit multiple places in the city and around it for an affordable price. Instead of booking domestic air tickets to various cities in Rochester, try using their bus service. Trains are also convenient and there are a number of train service stations at Rochester. Rochester station and Amtrak are famous train stations here. You can choose to travel by train to various parts of the city which turns out to be a cost effective mode of transport. You can also choose to visit multiple cities using the train services here.

13. Transportation cost

Visitors can reach Rochester either by Amtrak train or by taking a free and easy drive from Boston or New York City via throughway 1-90W or Washington DC using expressway 1-390N. Rochester can also be reached in less than four hours from Toronto by Car. To move around Rochester you may rent a car since it's one of the cities where the public transportation system isn't well established. However, the Rochester- Genesee Regional Transportation Authority provides local bus service in Rochester. The Regional Transit Service, a subsidiary of RGRTA serves Monroe County (i.e Rochester and its suburbs). The RTS buses have bicycle racks on the front which makes it flexible if you are willing to bike to the bus stop. Fares are $1 for each ride, $3 for a one-day pass, $14 for a 5-day pass, and $56 for a full month (30 days) pass. There are also discounted fares for seniors and children. The $1 fare is valid for one hour hence you can change buses and not pay again- however, tickets are usually not given unless you ask for one, so inform the driver you are planning to change. Another option is to hop on the expressway, and it will take you east, and west 490 or 590 or north or south (390) the inner loop should be able to get you around the inner section of downtown. Rochester has an Amtrak station located in the downtown part of the city. The most practical way you can use to get to and from Amtrak and the Greyhound bus station at the Rochester International Airport at Brooks Avenue or Midtown is using a Taxi Cab. You'll find a few taxis waiting at these stations around the scheduled arrival times. To travel from the Airport, taxis charge a minimum rate of $2.5 for the first 1/6 mile, $0.5 for each additional 1/6 mile, and $2 for each additional passenger. You may also arrange and book for a car rental agency to pick you up. There are six major rental agencies at the Greater Rochester International Airport- Budget, Avis, Hertz, Enterprise, Thrifty, and National. Megabus offers service to Rochester, New York from Buffalo, Syracuse, Toronto and New York. The buses stop at the Convention Center (5257 W Henrietta Road) and RIT Inn. Fares are from $1 when reserved in advance. With Lake Ontario, Genesee River, Irondequoit Bay, and Erie Canal, waterways are a rare but not an unheard method you can use to get to Rochester. Your best bet for mooring is at the Rochester harbor (the mouth of the Genesee) and in Irondequoit Bay. These two will only work if you are coming from Lake Ontario. You can often moor in Fairport, Brockport, or Pittsford if you are on the Erie Canal moving from points east or west.
