3. Significance

"chi-Wah-wah" is the capital city of Chihuahua state - by far country's largest state. Occupying almost 18% of Mexico's total land space, the city has been overlooked by many people who paid a visit to Mexico's other colonial cities. It is nevertheless one of the most important cities of Mexico thriving on agriculture and industry. This historical center is truly Mexican and deeply patriotic that adds remarkably to the sense of history found here. This traditional colonial heartland, is one of the mountainous regions with the greatest wealth in timber and archaeological remains in the state of Chihuahua thus attracting the travellers from all around the region. One cannot miss the ever-glorious colonial center, which will give you the historical feels and stands as one of the most incredible architectural building of the city. The city of Chihuahua is a kitschy mix of white- and blue-collar workers, blue-eyed Mennonite farmers, Rarámuri Indians, and stylish charros (cowboys) on smartphones.

4. History

Chihuahua - It has been said the name of the city derives from the Nahuatl language, meaning 'between two waters', other accepted terms are 'place of the holed-rock' or from Tarahumara, 'dry and sandy place'. However call it whatever, the city was founded in the year 1709, by Blas Cano de los Rios and Antonio Deza y Ulloa, Spanish explorers. The town was erected a Villa in the year 1718 with the name of San Felipe el Real de Chihuahua, and the name was shortened in 1823. For much of the 18th century, Chihuahua served as the de facto capital of Nueva Vizcaya because most governors preferred to reside there rather than in Durango, the capital of the province at that time. The city became a gathering hub for missionaries heading to and from the 'sierra', the mountainous region in western Chihuahua State where the native Tarahumara still reside. During the War of Independence, the city saw little action. However, it was in Chihuahua where Miguel Hidalgo, considered the Father of the Country, was held prisoner in the Federal Palace of Chihuahua and executed in 1811 at the nearby Government Palace by the Spaniards. During the French invasion, the city became the seat for important banks and wealthy families. The city was more involved during the Mexican Revolution (1910–1917), for it became at times the operations base for the División del Norte, the army led by Pancho Villa. It was during this time that the city grew dramatically economically, becoming the third wealthiest municipality (per capita) in the republic. During the 20th century, the city grew in population and learned to take advantage of its proximity with the U.S. border further growing properly and standing as what it is today.

5. Cultural identity

The Mexican culture is one of the most fascinating cultures on this planet. The perfect blend of strong native legends, artistic expressions and Spanish culture elements make the culture one of its own. Mexico consists of several ethnic groups. The mestizo (Amerindian-Spanish) group accounts for 60 percent of the population. Predominantly Amerindian people account for 30 percent, while 9 percent of the population is white. These groups create a culture that is unique to Mexico. Much of Mexican culture revolves around religious values and the church, as well as the concept of family and inclusiveness. Mexican cuisine is known for its blending of Indigenous and European cultures, and to a lesser extent, African and Asian. Popular dishes include tacos, enchiladas, mole sauce, atole, tamales, and pozole. Alcoholic beverages native to Mexico include mescal, pulque, and tequila. Mexican beer is also popular in Mexico and is exported. Chocolate originated in Mexico and was prized by the Aztecs. It remains an important ingredient in Mexican cookery. The society of Chihuahua is formed by indigenous groups with deeply rooted traditions and customs, of which the Tarahumaras is still the largest group, the descendants of the original inhabitants of the region who were forced and displaced to the mountain range now called the Tarahumara Sierra. Another group with a strong influence in the cultural and economic life in Chihuahua is that of the Menonitas, a community formed by hundreds of families coming from Canada. Unique and distinct, Mexican art is a huge representation of Mexican Culture displaying rich heritage and colourful pride. Mayan traditions are still present in the society, and this might be best represented in paintings. As the greatest exponent of the Mexican art, paintings have achieved a well deserved popularity outside Mexico. The foundation of Mexican music comes from its indigenous sounds and heritage. The ancient music is still played in some parts of Mexico. Traditional music includes Mariachi, Banda, Norteño, Ranchera and Corridos. Folk dances are a feature of Mexican culture. Significant in dance tradition is the "Jarabe Tapatío", known as "Mexican hat dance". Traditional dancers perform a sequence of hopping steps, heel and toe tapping movements.

16. Must try food and local savouries

Mexico has long been among the world's most popular holidays destinations attracting sun seekers and food lovers alike. Mexican food is incomplete without beans, corn and chilli peppers; these are the most common ingredients used in Mexican cooking. The food of this country is mostly influenced by Mesoamerican and Spanish cuisine. Keep an eye out for these traditional dishes to get a real taste of the country's finest cuisine.

Chilaquiles: This popular traditional breakfast dish features lightly fried corn tortillas cut into quarters and topped with green or red salsa (the red is slightly spicier). Scrambled or fried eggs and pulled chicken are usually added on top, as well as cheese and cream.

Pozole: Once used as part of ritual sacrifices, this pre-Hispanic soup these days comes in different variety. Chicken, pork and vegetarian being the popular one. Made from hominy corn with plenty of herbs and spices, the dish is traditionally stewed for hours, often overnight. Once ready to serve, lettuce, radish, onion, lime and chilli are sprinkled on top.

Tacos al pastor: This historic dish is one of the most popular varieties of tacos, with origins dating back to the 1920s and 30s. To create this dish, thin strips of pork are sliced off a spit, placed on a corn tortilla and served with onions, coriander leaves and pineapple.

Tostadas: Literally meaning toasted, tostadas are a simple but delicious dish involving corn tortillas fried in boiling oil until they become crunchy and golden. These are then served alone or piled high with any number of garnishes. Popular toppings include cheese, seafood, ceviche, cooked meat and frijoles.

Chiles en nogada: Boasting the three colours of the Mexican flag, chiles en nogada is one of Mexico's most patriotic dishes. Poblano chillies filled with picadillo (a mixture of chopped meat, fruits and spices) represent the green on the flag, the walnut-based cream sauce is the white and pomegranate seeds the red.

Enchiladas: Enchiladas date back to Mayan times when people in the Valley of Mexico would eat corn tortillas wrapped around small fish. These days both corn and flour tortillas are used and are filled with meat, cheese, seafood, beans, vegetables or all of the above.

Mole: Three states claim to be the original home of mole, a rich sauce popular in Mexican cooking. There are myriad types of mole but all contain around 20 or so ingredients, including one or more varieties of chilli peppers, and all require constant stirring over a long period of time. Tacos: These are crispy corn tortillas folded to make a half moon shape. Tacos are filled with meat, seafood, cheese or chicken and are garnished with salsa, cilantro, avocado, onion, tomato, or lettuce. Guacamole: Undoubtedly one of Mexico's most popular dishes but few know that this traditional sauce dates back to the time of the Aztecs. Made from mashed up avocados, onions, tomatoes, lemon juice and chilli peppers (and sometimes a clove or two of garlic), guacamole is often eaten with tortilla chips or used as a side dish. Huevos Divorciados: Huevos Divorciados which literally translates to divorced eggs is a breakfast dish popular in Mexico. This dish is made up of two fried eggs, one layered with salsa verde and the other with salsa roja so the eggs look different and taste different too, which tells the reason behind this humorous name.

19. Shopping

The city of Chihuahua is a decent place for someone who wants to fill their suitcases with some traditional stuff – From Souvenirs, local crafts to high end branded stores, there's everything to for your taste. Get ready to spend some dollars on the following shops – Fashion Mall: Also one of the best malls in the city! Shop till you drop from the many stores offering anything and everything along with eating from numerous kiosks. Book Stores, restaurants and Food Courts stand as the highlight of Fashion Mall. Plaza Galerías: Another shopping mall located in the city, Plaza Galerías is another one offering many shops to buy footwear, accessories to jewellery and clothing etc. Casa de las Artesanías del Estado de Chihuahua: This is your place to be to for a good collection of Chihuahuan crafts (including Mata Ortiz pottery) and Mexican foodstuffs such as pecans, oregano oil and stool. City Market: One of the biggest markets in the city, everything you get here is traditional. Just like a flea market you will find yourself surrounded by local vendors and food kiosks with tourists trying to bargain here and there.

20. Tourist benefits

The VAT charged in the country is 16% which is decent compared to the other countries of the Americas. One will certainly bump into a handful of duty free shops in the city of Chihuahua and if disappointed with that, then the airport stands as the best option to buy anything and everything from Liquor, Jewellery, Clothing to Footwear, Electronics etc. Things that can be imported in the country includes – • 200 cigarettes OR 50 cigars OR 200 grams of pipe tobacco. • 3 litres of wine or liquor (alcoholic beverages). • A reasonable quantity of perfume, eau-de-cologne and lotions for personal use. • goods up to USD 300. ## 22. Driving

To explore Mexico's colonial towns and cities, consider renting a car for your visit. Having your own car will give you more flexibility than using public transport options and, in some cases, offer you access to places which are otherwise difficult to visit without the use of a car. Driving is on the right side of the road in Mexico, which makes initial orientation a simple affair. Traffic signs are in Spanish, so before their trip, travellers should Google Mexican road signs to brush up on the most critical signs and symbols. Driving at night in Mexico is particularly challenging. Lighting on many highways is non-existent; livestock have the habit of wandering on the road; and it's difficult to observe hazards, such as potholes and debris. Another thing to keep an eye out for is topes. These are Mexican speed bumps, hence be aware of them. One can drive a car in and around the city. Renting a car requires you to carry your passport, driving license, International Driving Permit, Experienced driving skills and patience to handle the manic traffic. Know that the cops have a bad habit of pulling gringos to the side to earn some extra buck so make sure to carry all the proper documents with you at all times.

23. Travel essentials

Following are the necessary things to keep in mind while travelling in the country –

1. Adapter/Plug – The standard voltage in the country is 120V with a frequency of 60 Hz. Power sockets: type A / B in Mexico
2. It is always advised to carry sufficient prescribed medicines as OTCs may not be allowed.
3. In many tourist areas of Mexico, petty crime can be a serious concern. For travel in dangerous areas, bring a money belt, which is worn under your clothing and carries passports, cash and credit cards; money belts are particularly useful on long-distance, overnight buses.
4. One of the most useful things you can bring to Mexico is a pair of inexpensive flip-flops. They can be used as shower shoes, on the beach, on quick trips to the bathroom at night or for any other purpose.
5. There are no reciprocal health arrangements between Mexico and any other country, so travel insurance is essential.
6. Bring an umbrella or poncho for travel in the rainy season, and consider packing a small clothesline to dry swimsuits and other damp items in the humid Mexican weather.

25. Local currency

The currency of Mexico is Mexican Peso. 1 USD = 18.8685 MXN

26. Change vendor's commission, ATM charges

The city is home to a decent amount of ATMs. Most of the cards are accepted in the ATMs. Banks are likely to charge you with a foreign transaction fee in an ATM, hence make sure to confirm with your bank about the fee charges prior to your transaction. One can only take out a limited amount, so it is recommended to take out the maximum amount in one go. There are many shops, restaurants and hotels around the city that accept US dollars hence exchanging is not mandatory, however there are local shops that do not accept US Dollars so keeping some amount of local cash in handy is always recommended. In Mexico, merchants and businesses are no longer allowed to change U.S. dollars for pesos, but they will tell you the location of the nearest currency exchange office. If you have U.S. dollars, there are some places where you can exchange them for Mexican pesos. One will usually find a currency exchange counter at international airports throughout Mexico; these can be identified by the “Exchange” sign. You will have to show your passport in order to be able to exchange money. The exchange commission charged might be 5-10% higher than usual which is 2-3% hence make sure to confirm the price prior to buying the currency. Not all banks provide the service of exchanging pesos and dollars, and some require you to have an account with them. Ask someone at your hotel to tell you about the location of the nearest bank where tourists can exchange their currency. Credit cards are accepted in the city, however a fee is charged hence one should confirm the extra transaction fee from their bank prior to their travel.

27. Staying connected

Major networks that dominate Mexico are Movistar, Telcel and IUSACell. However make sure to unlock your phone prior to your travel in order to use any SIM card in the country. If your stay is for a longer period of time, it is recommended that you buy a local SIM to stay connected. One can purchase a SIM card at the airport upon arrival. Buying a SIM card in the country is affordable and one is surly to get good network at almost all the areas. One will find shops all over the city to get a SIM card. However to buy a SIM card, you will need a Xerox of your Passport for identification purposes. Mexico covers the mobile market through its 'Telcel' service since it is the biggest mobile network and also covers remote areas, however calling fees are often more expensive than those from competitors. When it comes to Wi-Fi connectivity one will not be disappointed with the networks since there are Internet Cafes and Wi-Fi hubs all over the restaurants and cafes in the city.

40. Tipping basics

Tipping is woven into the fabric of Mexican social culture. The tipping ritual is so commonplace that it also plays a significant role in Mexico's informal, cash-driven economy. It is customary to tip in Mexico, and tipping is expected in many situation. Do keep in mind that most of the people working in Mexico's service industries earn very modest salaries and rely on tips to earn a living wage, so if you receive good service, it is a good idea to show your appreciation by giving a tip. In restaurants in Mexico it is customary to leave a tip equal to 10 to 20% of the total cost of the bill. Taxi drivers need not be given any tip unless you have hired them on a full day basis, then a tip of 10% is expected to be given. In hotels it's mandatory to tip to the maids or the bell boys which is around MXN $25-50. Spa service providers (massage therapists, aestheticians, manicurists, hair stylists) are usually tipped 15-20% of the cost of the spa treatment.

41.Pet info

Following are the necessary things to be kept in mind if willing to bring your pet in Mexico • Mexico does not require that your pet be identified with a pet microchip, but it is recommended that you microchip your pet and register your contact information prior to traveling as a means of identification should your pet be lost or separated from you. • Proof of current vaccination against rabies at least 15 days prior to entering Mexico must be provided. Mexico will accept the 3 year vaccine from dogs and cats entering the country from the United States or Canada. All details about the vaccine must be on the health certificate. • Within 6 months of entering Mexico, your dog or cat must have be treated against internal and external parasites. • There are multiple international airports in Mexico where pets can enter the country. Notice should be given to veterinary officials so they will be available to inspect your pet upon landing. • If you and your pet are traveling to Mexico, you must carry a health certificate prepared by your veterinarian within two weeks of the day you cross the border. The certificate must include a description of your pet, the lot number of the rabies vaccine used, indication of distemper vaccination, and a veterinarian's statement that your pet is free from infectious or contagious disease. This certificate must be stamped by an office of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Conclusion – Why to select this destination

Capital of Mexico's biggest state, is a colourful but pleasant combination of noreteno character, bohemian student-y hangouts and revolutionary history. An overnight stop for many before or after riding the Ferrocarril Chihuahua Pacífico, Chihucha is a perfect example of "Don't judge the book by its cover" and is definitely worth. The historical center stands as the biggest highlight of the city and surrounds itself with grand colonial buildings, pedestrianized lanes and several beautiful plazas. Wander around the dotted restaurants, cafes and bars and set on the historical journey through the many museums that talks about the key episodes of Mexican history. Chihuahua is rather an intriguing location due to its strong sense of identity and the surrounding region taking people to places. Affectionately called Lady of the Desert, the city was founded in 1709 and is now home to a mixture of colonial architecture and modern industry.
