4. History

According to archaeological evidence, Innsbruck has been continuously occupied since the Stone Age. In the 4th century the Romans established an army station in the region to protect their commercial interests. In the 12th century the city was occupied by the Andechs, in the 13th century the rulership changed to Counts of Tyrol. The city became the capital of Tyrol in the 15th century and became an important city in European politics as Emperor Maximilian I resided in the city. During the Napoleonic wars the city was ceded to Bavaria, a French ally. Andreas Hofer became a hero for Innsbruck when he led a peasant army to victory against the Bavarian and French forces in the Battle of Bergisel. However the victory did not last long and Innsbruck came under Bavarian rule. The city was part of the Austrian Monarchy until 1918. During the World War II the city suffered many bomb attacks and was heavily damaged.
