1. Geographical location

Asuncion, refers to the Assumption of Mary - the city finds itself where the Pilcomayo river joins the Paraguay river upon a promontory 141ft above sea level on the left bank of the Paraguay. The city is geographically rich with gentle hills spread out in the area and enjoys a humid and warm climate throughout the year, with an average temperature of the city being 24°C. The bay of Asuncion and the Paraguay river separates the city from the Occidental Region of Paraguay and Argentina in the south part of the city making this city fall in the Central Department of the country.

3. Significance

Asuncion or Nuestra Señora Santa María de la Asunción is the cultural, economical, commercial and financial hub of the country. This charming city surrounds itself with gorgeous flowering trees and massive parks. The architecture talks about the rich colonial past, however the city won't jump out immediately and grab your attention. It moves with a pace, a slow pace. The city is well complemented by worn out mansions, plazas and dramatic palaces in a never been seen before look. South America's green capital isn't all green when it comes to the heavy traffic that surrounds the streets, however claiming to have 2.2 million people, the city's friendly locals will make you feel like home. Asuncion's outer space talks all about beaux artsy buildings and colonial architecture but once you dig deep down into the streets you'll bump into numerous shopping malls, exquisite nightclubs and excellent restaurants. Though Asunción is not nearly as pretty as some other South American cities, the downtown area is very walkable and features a handful of worthwhile sights, especially if the weather is nice.

4. History

The city is one of the oldest cities of South America and the longest continually inhabited area in the Rio de La Plata Basin, hence it is also referred to as Mother of the cities. The city was responsible in the finding of other cities like Villarrica, Santa Fe, Corrientes and Santa Cruz de la Sierra. The first European to visit the area may have been conquistador Juan de Ayolas, but the city was officially founded on the feast day of the Assumption on August 15, 1537 by Spanish explorers Gonzalo de Mendoza and Juan de Salazar. In 1542 natives destroyed the city of Buenos Aires thus Spaniards fled to the city of Asuncion making the city the center of a large Spanish colonial province. Asuncion became the seat of the First Synod Asuncion in the year 1603 that also set guidelines for the evangelization of natives in their lingua franca, Guaraní. In 1731, an uprising under José de Antequera y Castro was one of the first rebellions against Spanish colonial rule. The uprising failed, but it was the first sign of the independent spirit that grew among the natives of Paraguay. Paraguay declared its independence after overthrowing the Spanish Governor Bernardo de Velasco on May 14, 1811. After independence, under the presidency of Gaspar Rodríguez de Francia, who ran the country with little outside influence from 1814 to 1840, roads were built and the streets were named followed by constructions of universities, schools and other important infrastructural buildings. However, the city went through a disastrous War - the Triple Alliance (1865-1870) that caused more deaths than any other South American war, and was fought between Paraguay and the allied countries of Argentina, Brazil, and Uruguay. Asunción was captured in 1868, and occupied by Brazilian troops until 1876. The war had a devastating, long-term effect on Paraguay with mostly women and children surviving. After the Paraguayan War, Asunción began a slow recovery attempt. Towards the end of the 19th century and during the early years of the 20th century, a flow of immigrants from Europe and the Ottoman Empire came to the city. Today, the city stands as more prosperous than ever compared to other countries in the continent.

5. Cultural identity

Paraguay's main culture is derived from its Spanish colonial roots and traditional Guaraní native customs. In the 1600s, most Spaniards who arrived from Europe inter-married with the native women. This cultural blend is seen in Paraguay's forms of arts, crafts, music, festivals, literature, cinema, fashion, languages. The eclectic mix of the old and new have contributed immensely to the rich production of the arts and crafts of Paraguay. Paraguayan embroidery, lace making, and local music are representations of the cultural fusion. Food is an important part of the cultural ethos of any country, and in Paraguay, cornmeal, butter, milk, cottage cheese, eggs and fresh corn kernels are some of the major dishes. The capital of the country is one of those beloved by poets and musicians who have devoted dozens of poems and songs. You will find the city is bustling with people as prideful as any on the continent going on and on about their city, football clubs and the culture. The city will take sometime to gel along with you, but once you get to know it, you'll definitely fall in love with it. Paraguayan dances have a great history and heritage and are among the most popular cultural activities. There are various forms of dance in Paraguay, which have developed out of the influence of the Spanish dances, some of the most popular ones include Solito, Polka, El Chopi, La Palomita and Pericon. When it comes to Paraguayan music, it is overtly European in nature. Both the structure and the instrumentations employed in tradition Paraguayan music have clearly exhibit the strong European influences exerted on the indigenous culture of the land.

6. Natural resources

The city isn't home to any National parks, however the country is known for Cerro Cora National Park, Nacunday National Park and Paraguay Ypoá National Park. The natural resources bustling on the soil of the country are iron ore, timber, limestone, manganese, hydropower, mica and natural gas.

11. Events calendar

Month

Events

New Year's Day

Paraguay celebrates the New Year just as the rest of the world, with all-night celebrations, fireworks and music. Asuncion is the best spot to catch the action.

Carnival

This incredibly festival multi-day event takes place at the same as in other countries. Parades, events, live music and dance, a good time is still guaranteed. Takes place in the first week of February. Dates are flexible.

Holy Week Festival

In gearing up for the Easter celebrations, Paraguay holds an annual week-long festival to set the pious mood for the coming events. Dates are flexible, since it takes place in the last 2 weeks of the month.

Cerro Cora

This national holiday commemorates the death of former president Francisco

Solano Lopez with a ceremony in the capital. It is observed on March 1.

Easter

As in most other South American countries, Easter is celebrated with all the religious fervour you'd expect from a predominantly Catholic population. Takes place on March 27th.

Independence Day

All over the country, events are held to celebrate Paraguay's independence from Spain with parades, concerts and fireworks. May 14th is the date of celebration in the country
Labor Day

May 1 is celebrated as Labor Day, also known as May Day or Workers' Day (in Spanish, Día del Trabajador), in many parts of the world to commemorate the important role played by workers in building nations and societies.
Dia de San Juan

Another annual festival which has been happening for decades takes a more light-hearted look at Saint John with music, food and games around the country. The festival takes place in the last week of June, dates remain flexible.

Chaco Armistice Day

The Chaco War, which Paraguay fought against Bolivia between 1932 and 1935, ended with a ceasefire agreement on June 12, 1935. On this day, Paraguayans celebrate their victory and pay homage to all those who lost their lives during the war.

Verbena de San Juan

This traditional festival is part religious, part cultural, and part bizarre, with events such as walking on hot embers taking centre stage. It is held on June 24.

Dia de la Virgen de la Asuncion

The Ascension of the Virgin Mary is the theme of this very important religious and cultural celebration which consists of processions and ceremonies. The festival takes place on 15th August every year.

Foundation of Asunción Day

This day commemorates the founding of Asunción by Spanish explorer Juan de Salazar on August 15, 1537. It is also the day in 1967 when the revised constitution of Paraguay was adopted.

Battle of Boquerón Day

This holiday commemorates the historic Battle of Boquerón and is observed on September 29

Oktober Fest

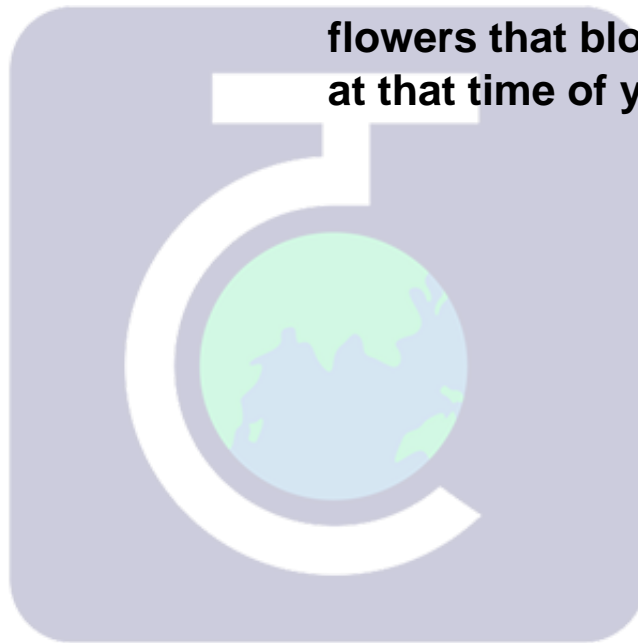

For an amazing insight into the curious immigrant communities that have shaped Paraguay, you can attend this beer festival which is modeled on its German namesake, held in Munich every year. This event is also held at the same time as its German counterpart, in early September, with the main festivities taking place in Asuncion, where German descendants of Paraguay proudly celebrate their heritage. The festival takes place in the first week of October.

Dates are flexible.

Christmas

Christmas is a day of great joy for Christians all over the world because it the day chosen by the Catholic Church to celebrate the birth of Jesus. In Paraguay Christmas is the most important religious festival. Since in Paraguay it falls during summer because the country is located in the Southern Hemisphere, homes are decorated with flowers that bloom in the region at that time of year.

The port is located around 7kms from the city. Train: Estacion Botánico: The train station located in the city is around 2kms from the city center.

Index14. Transportation cost

The city is bustling with buses and taxis to take you around. Both these transport are inexpensive. Following are the costs of each one – Buses: Buses are called ubiquitos and are the cheapest option in the city. They go more or less everywhere in the city, however to see the destination do pay attention on the board on the front window. There aren't many bus stops in the city so stick your arm out and stop the bus to hop in. The fare for one single ride is GS $2,700. Taxi: Taxis are bustling around the city and are available at anytime. Quite inexpensive these old, lumbering diesel Mercedes start at GS $5,000, however during the night-time a 30% surcharge is added (after around 10PM) Train: One can also commute to certain places by train. The ticket will cost around GS $3000

Index15. Baggage allowance

One can carry heavy amount of luggage into the city when travelling from the nearby cities in buses, also carrying heavy baggage's in taxis and trains is also a fine option, however make sure not to carry heavy bags in the locals buses or boats. Also, just roam around with light backpacks or money belt when exploring the city to avoid any inconvenience.

16. Must try food and local savouries

This bilingual country boasts of numerous traditional treats that are either named in Guarani, Spanish or a mixture of both languages. There are no major variations in the way dishes are served and prepared in different regions but the core recipe remains the same. Here are some of the must tries dishes – Tereré: A traditional beverage that has been a part of the country's culture as long as people have lived here. It consists of a mixture of herbs called yerba and it is usually the first drink that the locals have it in the morning. Guiso popó - A very traditional dish, similar to a stew that contains chicken and rice, pickled with sweet pepper and garlic. It also has some variations where the rice is replaced by pasta or potatoes. Mandioca - (also known as Yuka, Yuca or Cassava) which are similar to potatoes, are eaten with almost every meal as they are a native crop of Paraguay. In fact, it is so common there is a local expression, Más Paraguayo que la mandioca (More Paraguayan than the Mandioca). Arró Quesú - Paraguayan style rice, is similar to a cheese and milk risotto but it has to be made only with white rice and Quesú Paraguai ((Paraguayan cheese) Asado - Literally barbecue though the Paraguayan Asado is often accompanied with Sopa Paraguaya or Chipá Guazu. Note, an asado has many types of meat, and LOTS of it! No scrawny hamburger patties here. Dulce de Guayaba – A sweet jam made from guava, served alone or eaten with bread. Dulce de Mamón - a dessert made from Papaya (papaw) and served with caramel. Kaguyjy - Also known as mazamorra, it is one of the most traditional desserts of Paraguay. It is made from corn and sugar and sometimes honey or milk is added. Ka'i ladrillo – A candy made with peanuts and molasses, cut into small cubes that look like small bricks. In fact ladrillo is Spanish for brick. The full name actually means “the brick of the monkey”. Bori Bori - a thick soup to which dumplings (or small balls) of cornmeal and cheese and sometimes chicken are added. Milanesa - Even though this is not originally from Paraguay, the milanesa has become a staple part of Paraguayan cuisine. Milanesas are crumbed meat filets. Chipa Guazú - basically a corn cake, made with cheese, fresh corn, eggs, oil and milk, and cooked in the Tatakua (a clay oven). It is similar to the Sopa Paraguaya which has corn flour instead of grains of corn. Puchero - A traditional stew made with meat, vegetables (like carrot, pumpkin/squash and onions). Quesú Paraguái - Also know as Queso Paraguayo, this is typical cheese made by rural artisans. Sopa Paraguaya / Sopá Paraguái - (Literally Paraguayan Soup). This is probably the world's only "solid" soup. More than a soup, it is actually more like an open pie made of ground corn, cheese, eggs and milk. Empanadas - Pastries filled with different combinations, including, egg, meat, chicken, corn, cheese and ham. Paraguayan Empanadas are normally fried and not often made in the oven like the Chilean or Argentinean ones. Also Paraguayan empanadas are sometimes eaten between two pieces of bread like a sandwich, something people from other countries tend to notice when they see it. Bife Koygua - Meat (steak) topped with fried onions and one or two fried eggs on top.

Asuncion is a para-para paradise for all the shopaholics out there. Bustling with over 15 malls, numerous street markets and shopping plazas the city will make sure that you go back with your wallet empty. High end branded stores, local shops and various handicraft stalls await your presence. So stock up some cash and get ready to swipe that card on the following centers-

20. Tourist benefits

The Value added tax charged in the country is 10% which is quite low compared to the other countries of the continent. When it comes to duty free shopping, one will spot quite a few shops in the city, otherwise Airport stands as the safest option where one will find anything and everything to shop. When travelling to the country visitors may bring certain amounts of tobacco products, perfume and alcohol, however make sure the value of goods should not exceed USD 300. One should also keep in mind that there is an airport departure tax that is to be paid while leaving the country and that is $18.

Index21. Essential local apps

Easy Spanish Language Learning: This application will definitely come in handy to learn a few basic Spanish words while on your way to the city, since English is not widely spoken or understood. Radio Asunción Paraguay: Enjoy the best of radio station of the city in this one place and groove to the tunes of local music.

22. Driving

You can use your UK driving licence or an International Driving Permit while in Paraguay if you are visiting as a tourist. You must have your driver's licence, passport and entrance stamp with you while driving. If you hire a car, take out adequate insurance. Driving standards are poor and traffic accidents, particularly involving motorcycles, are frequent. Many motorcyclists drive with no crash helmets and no lights at night. There are also regular police checks throughout, usually to check your vehicles and to perform breathalyser tests and take extra while driving in the city. Avoid driving on country toads at night, also Stop signs, traffic lights and speed limits are often ignored and road signs are not installed in all over the city hence it can be quite confusing.

39. Do's and Don'ts

Do's • Do go with a malaria medication to the city. • Do be vaccinated for hepatitis A and hepatitis B. • Do pay respects to all the customs and traditions of the country since Paraguayans are a conservative people. • Do learn some basic Spanish and Guarani as English is not widely spoken. • Do be polite and soft-spoken since people do not appreciate shouting or rude behaviour. Exhibit patience in all of your actions. • Scantily-clad women are not appreciated in this culture, and will only earn you scowls from the locals. The rule of thumb for blending in is to take a cue from what people are wearing and follow suit. • Arrange for sufficient medicines to meet your personal medical needs. Check with the embassy of the country you are visiting to ensure your medicine is legal in the countries you are travelling to. Obtain a doctor's letter stating who the medicines are for, what they are, the dosage, and leave medicines in their original packaging. Don't • Don't drink tap water unless it has been chemically disinfected, filtered or boiled. • Do not carry large amount of cash, heavy jewellery etc. in shady areas and public transport. • Don't give your opinion about local politics. • Do not photograph anything associated with the military, including soldiers, bridges or equipment.

Index40.Tipping basics

The tipping charge in Paraguay is around 10% which is pretty low compared to the rest of the world hence tipping is considered customary in the country. Taxis drivers need not be given any tip unless you have hired them on a full day basis, then a tip of 10% is expected to be given. In hotels it's upon you to give the tip to the maids or the bell boys which is around 1-2% whereas in restaurants a tip of 10-15% is definitely expected since a lower amount of service tax is charged.

Index41.Pet info

Paraguay does not quarantine healthy pets who meet the following requirements:

- Your pet be vaccinated for rabies and various other diseases between 30 days and 12 months of entry.
- Shortly before travel, a Veterinary Certificate for Paraguay must be completed by a USDA or CFIA licensed veterinarian and endorsed by the USDA or CFIA if traveling from the United States or Canada. If you are traveling from another country, the Governing Authority of your country responsible for the import and export of animals should endorse the forms for you.
- A copy of the Rabies Certificate should also be included for endorsement.

Conclusion – Why to select this destination

Founded on August 15, 1537 - the Feast of the Assumption, the day the city is named after, Asuncion proudly boasts of its colonial past through its excellent architectural buildings, narrow streets, decorated facades and massive balconies. This metropolitan city, home to about 2.2 million inhabitants is rather young with 65% of its residents being only under the age of 30. The city bustles its neighbourhoods with endless shopping centers, exquisite boutiques, fast food stalls, excellent restaurants etc. Alongside the locals wearing fake Rolex watches and moneychangers who patrol the many plazas and streets, indigenous women sell bundles of roots and herbs - centuries old remedies of every illness. Going well with the hustle and bustle of the commercialization are the ancient government buildings that overlooks the Bay of Asuncion as cool breezes rustle through flame trees. Most travellers who come around to the country start their journey at this capital. A charming, colonial city, this is the continent's most endearing capitals and is blessed with pretty piazzas, neoclassical facades and tree-lined boulevards. So what are you waiting for? Pack your bags and come to the gorgeous capital!
