1. Geographical location

The biggest city in the South Island lies on the South Island's east coast, just north of Banks Peninsula. Christchurch lies in Canterbury, close to the focal point of the east bank of the South Island, east of the Canterbury Plains. It is situated close to the southern end of Pegasus Bay and is limited toward the east by the Pacific Ocean drift and the estuary of the Avon and Heathcote Rivers. Toward the south and southeast, the urban segment of the city is constrained by the volcanic slants of the Port Hills isolating it from Banks Peninsula. Christchurch has a temperate climate with moderate rainfall.
