1. Geographical location

Having an area of 140 square kilometres, Seville is situated on the same parallel as San Francisco, which is one of the west coast cities of the United States of America. Further east from Seville in the Mediterranean basin, it shares the same parallel as Seoul which is the capital of South Korea. The Andalusian coast contains this city, and the city itself is located a few miles inland from the coast. Being the largest city within the southern side of the Iberian Peninsula, it is situated at a relative distance from Lisbon in Portugal.

2. Neighbouring cities/countries

Some Of The Neighbouring Cities Of Seville Are Cordoba And Malaga. Both Are Located At A Distance Of 122 Kilometres And 157 Kilometres Respectively. In Addition To This, Tangier And Tetuoan In Morocco Are Located At A Respective Distance Of 178 And 208 Kilometres.

3. Significance

Seville has been important cities of Spain since the ancient times. As the Americas were discovered, Seville turned out to be the economic centre of the entire empire of Spain. The port of Seville helped in monopolising the transoceanic trade as well. At present, Seville houses the renowned Seville Heritage Park which is recognised as the UNESCO world heritage centre. Hispalis was a significant port on Rio Guadalquivir which is located at a distance of around 100 kilometres from the Atlantic Ocean. Seville was declared as the capital of the new Autonomous Andalusia which was situated within the boundaries of democratic Spain.

4. History

During the 14th century, Seville was considered as the most imperative Castilian city. The city achieved its biggest break during the year of 1503. Reason being, it was granted a monopoly on Spanish trade with the American continent. Seville even became a magnet for priests and bankers during this time as it was one of the richest and most cosmopolitan cities on the face of the earth. During the 16th and 17th century, the city witnessed a surge in terms of art and culture and because of this, most of the renowned painters and artists like Zurbaran and Murillo were settled here.

5. Cultural identity

The cultural identity of this city is simply overwhelming in terms of food and festivals. Offering a wide array of dishes, there are some common food items (tortilla, paella and curd ham) which can be found throughout the country. The cultural identity of Seville is further denoted by outdoor activities which are hosted in the Seville national park are a treat for visitors across the country. Additionally, the tapas bars and restaurants of this city have an identity of their own. Seville considered itself as the ‘tapas capital’ of the world for a reason. The number of these tapas outlets is increasing with every passing year.

6. Natural resources

Seville is one of the provinces in the Andalusia region and this entire region is filled up with natural resources. The natural resources of this region are scattered over all the different provinces. Seville being a prominent province is home to natural resources like copper, iron, lead and zinc. Apart from this, the land of this city is considered fertile which helps in growth of huge quantities of fruits like oranges and grapes.

7.1.1. Alcázar

The inside of Seville's Alcazar is simply magical and even though it was constructed during the dark ages of Europe, the design of the castle has nothing sad or dark about it. Declared as a World Heritage site in 1987, Alcazar was originally founded as a fort for the governors of Seville in 913. The building has stood through 11 centuries and during this tenure, it has been reconstructed a lot of times. Alcazar has large gardens which consist of pools and fountains and there is a raised gallery with porticoes which were fashioned long back during the 16th century. Don't miss out on the gardens which lie east beyond a long wall, which is considered heavenly by most of the visitors.

7.1.2. Hospital los Venerables

Constructed in the 17th century, it was used as a medical center for aging priests. But now, the functionality of the building has completely changed and Hospital los Venerables houses the most admirable art collections in the entire town of Seville. The masterpieces here have been anchored by Diego Velazquez Santa Rufina and these art lessons are the best offered by the city. There is provision for audio commentary as well which helps the visitors revisit the changes that took place here. The commentary explains how the darkness from the medieval period transformed into the hardcore Velazquezian museum.

7.1.5. Museum of Fine Arts

Seville's Museo de bellas Artes is one of the imperative structures of the city which depicts the pertinent role of this city during the Golden Age of the 17th century. The building is housed in the Convento de la Merced and the entire flow of this museum is chronological with prominently dark and religious work. The most pleasing room is the former convent's church and there are numerous paintings reflecting the work of masters of Sevillian Baroque. Other important artists and their works here include Murillo whose Inmaculada Conception

Grande (painted in the year of 1650) is displayed at the head of the church. In addition to this, Pacheco and Zurbaran along with sculptor Juan Martinez Montanes's works are also on display here.

7.1.6. Hospital de la Caridad

During the year of 1810, the hospital was occupied by Napoleon's troops and used to be a hospital for aged people. Founded by Miguel de Manara, the main part of the building is the decorated chapel which contains an incessant amount of paintings by the Golden Age painters mostly belonging to Murillo and Roldan. As the building was occupied by the troops, a lot of paintings were stolen and they never returned to the original building. However, their duplicates were made and as of now, they occupy the place of the originals.

12. Transportation hubs

There are two main bus stations in the city of Seville. Both the stations- Prado de San Sebastian (37.380917, -5.986937) and Plaza de Armas (37.391948, -6.003964), are located in the centre of the city in order to ensure convenience for the locals and visitors. San Sebastian is the older among the two bus stations. It is situated within a typical Seville- yellow colored building which has high ceilings. The bus station is easily accessible by tram and metro line. Offering long-distance bus services to cities like Barcelona, Cartagena and Murcia the buses from San Sebastian cater to numerous other destination in Andalucia. Whereas, the Plaza de Armas is the one with a moder touch and is located by the river in old town of Seville. Housed in a square building made up of white concrete, buses travelling from this bus station reach out to Huelva and Costa de la Luz which falls within the Andalucian region. The buses travel to Madrid, Barcelona Alicante and different villages which are situated to the north and west of the city. Being the sixth busiest international airport catering to Western Andalusia and neighbouring provinces, the airport has flight connection to 42 different destinations. This destinations cover Europe and northern part of Africa.

Index15. Must try food and local savouries

In terms of food, there is no dearth of specialities in the town of Seville. The city offers different types of cuisines which should not be missed at any cost. For instance, the torrijas served in some restaurants here is impeccable and it is difficult to find the same preparation in other towns. Talking about desserts, banana toffee and blueberry cream cake deserve to be tasted every single time you visit the city.

16. Restaurant & Nightlife

There is almost an assortment of different restaurants offered by Seville. The self-proclaimed tapas capital of the world has a lot of amazing eateries to offer. The number is so generous that you can live in this city for years and still be ignorant about some of the restaurants here. With so many tapas bars, it is always a difficult decision to choose one for spending your time. It is almost improbable to compete with Seville when it comes to food. This is the kind of scale Seville offers when it comes to the gastronomical scenario.
