3. Significance

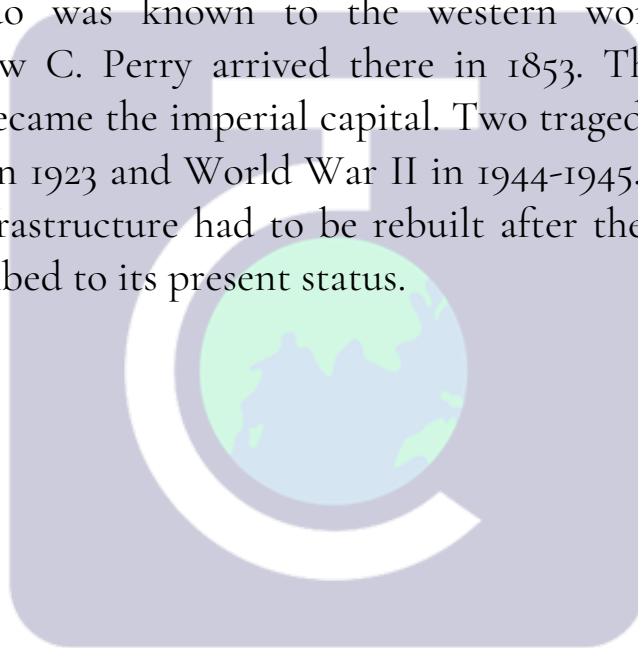

Tokyo is a wealthy metropolis with 51 Fortune Global 500 companies and several other foreign investments and international relations. Being the capital city Tokyo has more resources than any other city in Japan, not just in terms of economy. It is the hub of television networks, transportation, electronics and broadcasting industries, and international tourism. In terms of lifestyle, facilities, and hospitality Tokyo ranks number one on the international scene. Tokyo scores high in the academic field also with numerous top-class colleges, vocational schools, and universities where global student representations are high. It is also the founder member of the Asian Network of Major Cities 21.

4. History

The earliest settlements in the region were in 3rd millennium BC. The history of Tokyo is the fairy tale story of how a small fishing village called Edo became a global power through centuries. The place first became an important area when the Edo clan built their castle there. Shrines and temples were set up near the castle and gradually merchants came and businesses flourished with ferry and shipping routes. Edo was known to the western world when American Commodore Matthew C. Perry arrived there in 1853. The city was renamed Tokyo in 1869 and became the imperial capital. Two tragedies hit the city in the form of earthquake in 1923 and World War II in 1944-1945. The entire city with its buildings and infrastructure had to be rebuilt after the war and slowly this magnificent city climbed to its present status.

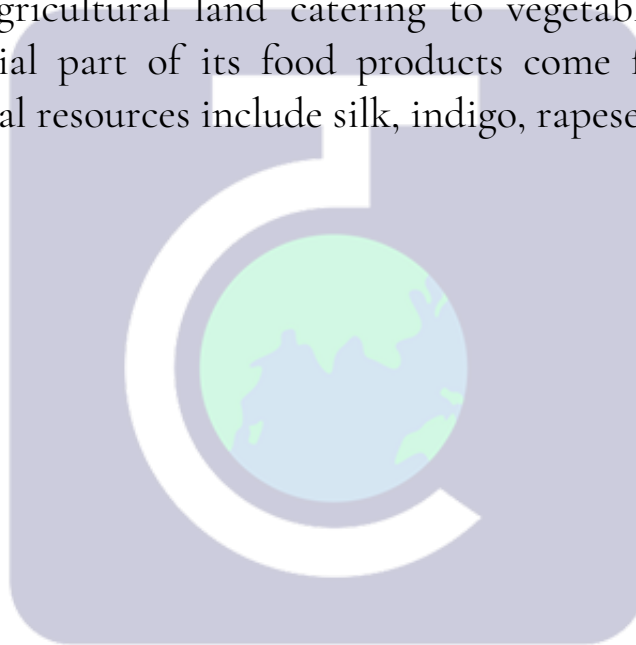

5. Cultural identity

Tokyo has a very metropolitan culture and the people are very busy with their lives and work. The city houses a number of museums specializing in traditional Japanese art, Western art, emerging science and innovation, modern art, etc. Performing arts have a special place in the capital city mainly due to the presence of tourist population. Several theatres where regular performances are held can be found in and around Tokyo. A number of festivals are celebrated periodically like the biennial Kanda Festival, annual fireworks display, etc. During the cherry blossom season, the local people and visitors from all over the world flock to the parks and gardens for picnics.

Index6. Natural resources

The major natural resource in Tokyo is marine wealth. Fishing is mostly concentrated on the outer islands of Tokyo like Izu Oshima and Hachijojima. The main products include nori, skipjack tuna, and aji. 36% of Tokyo is covered by forest with trees like cryptomeria and Japanese cypress. The forests are mostly in the western mountainous region. Tokyo is a very populous city with less than 8,000 hectares of agricultural land catering to vegetable, fruit, and flower farming. A substantial part of its food products come from the rest of the country. Other natural resources include silk, indigo, rapeseed, cotton, etc.

Index12. Key local guides and tours

Tokyo offers a plethora of sights and activities for the foreign visitors. It is quite impossible to reach all the places and do everything within the short span of a tour. Local guides and tour packages that suit your interests and budget can be very helpful in exploring Tokyo. Licensed private guides can be hired for a day or for a number of days as you require. Different types of tour packages include cycling and biking tours, hiking and walking tours, shopping tours, adventure tours, nature and wildlife tours, out of city tours, after dark tours, youth and family tours, religious heritage tours, etc.

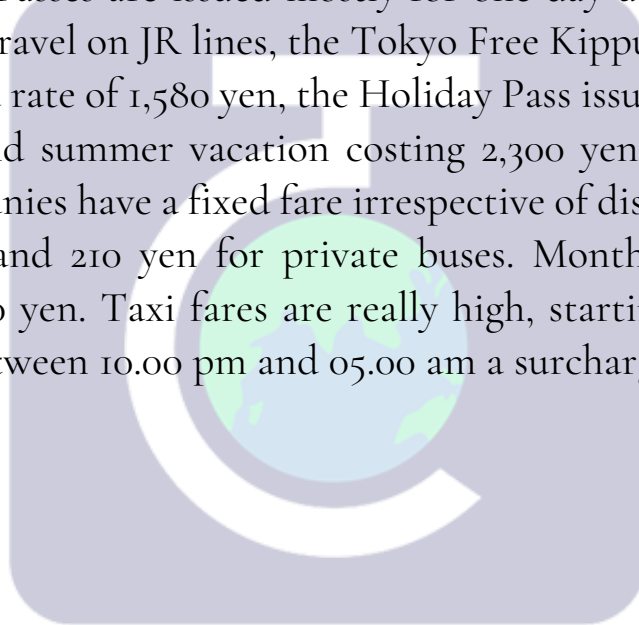

13. Transportation hubs

Tokyo's main international airport is Narita Airport at a distance of about 60 kilometers from central Tokyo. Travelers have diverse options to reach the city centre from the airport depending on budget and time. The cheapest option is the Keisei Limited Express train at 1,000 yen and takes about 75 minutes to reach. Several shuttle bus services also charge 1,000 yen for a one-way trip. The easiest way is taking the limousine bus to hotels at a rate of 3,100 yens. The Keisei Skyliner is the fastest mode of transport to central Tokyo in 40 minutes and costs about 2500 yen. Taxis are the costliest with a fare of 14,000 to 40,300 yen. Haneda Airport mainly handles domestic flight services. JR East is the largest railway network in Tokyo. Metro and bus services are run by government and private operators.

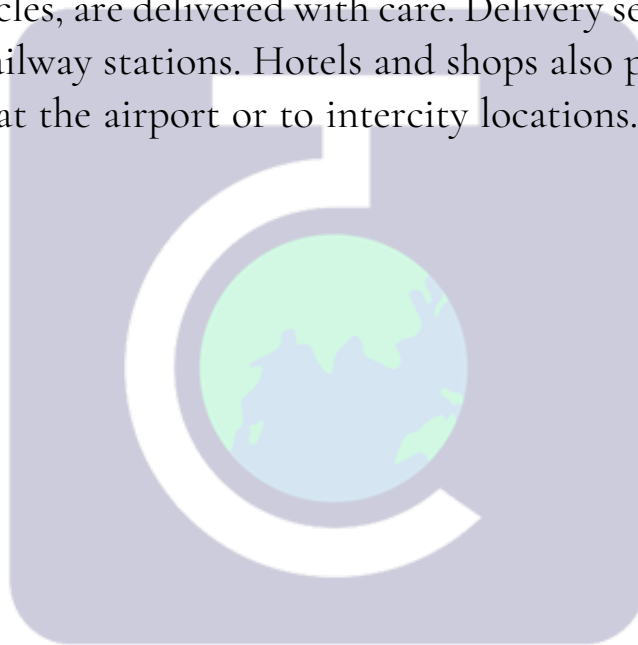

14. Transportation cost

Trains and subways are the most popular form of public transport in Tokyo. The fare system is based on distance starting from 110 yen to 310 yen for stops within central Tokyo. There are prepaid fare cards offered by JR East and private lines. These cards can be used on subway, train, and bus lines in Tokyo. An initial deposit of 500 yen is paid to get a fare card. Each card can store a maximum of 20,000 yen in value. Passes are issued mostly for one-day use. The Tokunai Pass for 730 yen used for travel on JR lines, the Tokyo Free Kippu used on JR, subway, and city bus lines at a rate of 1,580 yen, the Holiday Pass issued only on weekends, national holidays, and summer vacation costing 2,300 yen, etc. are all one day passes. All bus companies have a fixed fare irrespective of distance. The rate is 200 yen for Toei buses and 210 yen for private buses. Monthly pass for busses is approximately 10,000 yen. Taxi fares are really high, starting at 710 yen for the first 2 kilometers. Between 10.00 pm and 05.00 am a surcharge of 20% is required.

15. Baggage allowance

Only a few trains in Tokyo have space for large pieces of luggage, and buses have none. It is advisable not to travel with a lot of luggage on public transport, especially during rush hours. Travelers can leave their luggage at the left luggage facilities costing 500 to 1,000 yen per day. Baggage delivery services are available in Tokyo that carries your luggage to the address given. Luggage of all size and shape, including bicycles, are delivered with care. Delivery services are available at airports and major railway stations. Hotels and shops also provide this service to deliver your luggage at the airport or to intercity locations. The cost varies from 1,500 to 3,000 yen.
