3. Significance

Aarhus's location provides for a natural harbour. In fact the Port of Aarhus is the largest industrial port in northern Europe. In addition, Aarhus has been one of the leading development centers for information technology, media, life sciences, architecture etc. Aarhus also take pride in being the European Capital of Culture.

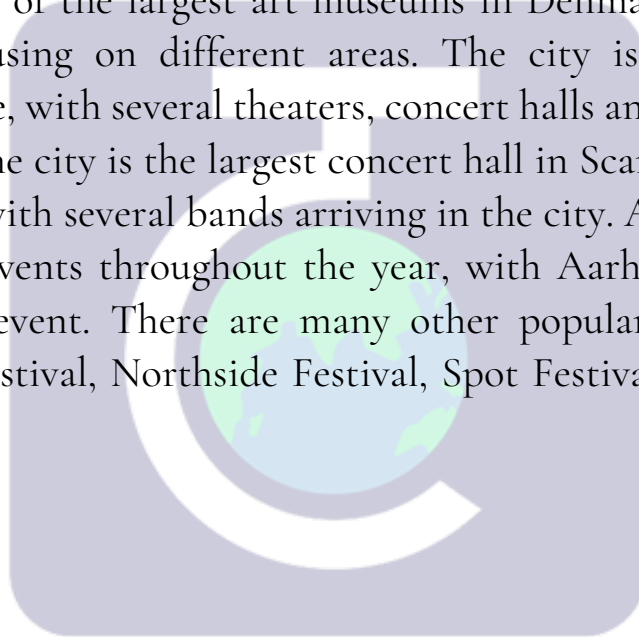

4. History

Aarhus is considered to be one of the oldest towns in Denmark, having been established in the early Viking age. Recent archaeological findings suggest the city was a town in the 8th century. Aarhus' first church, the Holy Trinity Church was built in the center of the town around 900 AD. During the middle-ages Aarhus was a prosperous religious centre, many religious buildings were built in and around Aarhus during this period including the Aarhus Cathedral which was initiated in the 12th century. In the late 15th century the defensive earthen ramparts which had been in place since the Vikings had to be removed to accommodate the city's rapid growth. The next growth spurt for the city came in the 1980s when service sector overtook industry and crafts as the leading employment centre. Many workers started commuting to the city from other areas in Jutland. There was also a growth of student population as the city became a centre of research and education.

5. Cultural identity

Aarhus will be the European capital of culture in 2017 which has a variety of cultural institutions. The city is home to two of the biggest museums in the country Den Gamle By and ARoS Aarhus Kunstmuseum. Den Gamle By showcases life from 16th century to this day. The 75 buildings from different periods that it presents themselves form a miniature town. The ARoS Aarhus Kunstmuseum is one of the largest art museums in Denmark. There are several other museums focusing on different areas. The city is also known for its performing arts scene, with several theaters, concert halls and operas. Musikhuset which is located in the city is the largest concert hall in Scandinavia. Rock music is also very popular with several bands arriving in the city. Aarhus also celebrates many festivals and events throughout the year, with Aarhus Festuge being the most popular such event. There are many other popular events like Aarhus International Jazz Festival, Northside Festival, Spot Festival, Grøn Koncert and many more.

6. Natural resources

The forests are also home to the Marselisborg Deer Park which occupies 54 acres and acts as a pasture for sika and roe deer. There are sections in the forest that represent climatic epochs from the last Ice Age to the present. Aarhus has a very high number of parks and green areas inside the city which comprise an area of around 1400 acres. Among them is the Central Botanical Gardens which first established in 1875 have grown to house many plants and trees from all regions of the world. Some other popular parks in the area are the University Park with its large oak trees and a unique design, the Memorial Park that offers panoramic views of the Bay of Aarhus. The largest park in the city is the Marienlyst Park that comprises woodlands, large open grasslands and soccer fields. Underground resources in Denmark include oil, natural gas, gravel, sand, limestone, chalk clay and salt.

Index11. Key local guides and tours

To make the most of your trip to Aarhus you may enlist the help of a local guide which will help you understand more about the history, art and culture of the city. In Denmark tour guiding is not a regulated trade and anyone can call themselves a guide but authorized guides wear the official 'three towers' badge.

12. Transportation hubs

Airport The Aarhus Airport is located in Tirstrup, at a distance of around 36 km from the city. You may take a bus to the city which costs Dkr 100 or a taxi which costs around Dkr 650. Train The Aarhus Central Station is located in the city centre and has connecting trains to most Danish cities. There are also some trains to Hamburg. Bus The main bus station in Aarhus is Aarhus Rutebilstation where you will find buses to several Danish cities, which are usually cheaper than trains. There are also a few buses that connect to Hamburg. Boat There is a ferry service that connects to Odden and Kalundborg on the northwest coast of Zealand.

13. Transportation cost

Aarhus is a very clean and compact city and it is very easy to get around all the major attractions on foot. For using buses, you can also purchase Aarhus card which lets you use the buses for free and also provides free/ discounted admission to many attractions. The pass costs Dkr 129 (Dkr 69 for children) for 24 hours and Dkr 179 (Dkr 79 for children) for 48 hours. Bicycle Bikes4rent operates from Frederiksgade 78, and you may rent a bike for any duration from a day to 2 months. Prices and details can be found online. From 1 April to 30 October, a free bike service is available for traveling within the city, you just drop a 20 Dkr coin to rent the bike from any of the 50 locations in the city, after you park the bike at any of the rental locations, you get your money back. Bus There are two bus systems in Aarhus. For traveling within the city, use the Yellow buses. A ticket to travel within the city costs Dkr 20 (Dkr 10 for children). You may also purchase a 10-trip ticket that varies in price according to your destination or you could also take a monthly bus pass which costs approximately 360 Dkr. Also in Denmark, train tickets are valid for traveling in buses as long as you are within the time limit on the ticket. Taxi There are numerous taxi operators in Aarhus and finding a taxi is not difficult. The starting fare for taxis is Dkr 42 and they charge Dkr 8.50 for every subsequent kilometer.

15. Must try food and local savouries

Denmark is considered a gastronomical heaven which is reflected in the number of Michelin starred restaurants it has and Aarhus is no exception to this. There are several high quality restaurants in which you can enjoy gourmet food, and throughout the city you will find Pølsevogn which literally mean "sausage wagon" selling you all kinds of hot dogs and sausages. Some of the delicacies that you will find here are Frikadeller which are pan-fried meatballs of pork in curry sauce, served with rice and cucumber salad or Medisterpølse which is a thick spicy sausage made of minced meat, fried and served in different ways. Anywhere in Aarhus, you can order 'a set' (Århus Set) which is a set of Ceres Top beer and a shot of Arnbitter both of which originated in Aarhus.

Conclusion – Why to select this destination

Aarhus, the second largest city in Denmark has something for all kinds of travelers. It is a historic city with many historic buildings, most notably its churches. Among the most visited churches is its 12th century Domkirke that is one of the tallest churches in Northern Europe. From the top of the 310 feet high bell-tower you can see the spires of the 15th century Church of Our Lady which is another architectural gem. There are several interesting Museums in the city including ARoS modern art museum which is one of the finest modern art museums in Europe. The city is also home to the world's first museum dedicated to the history of women along, there are many more gems like this throughout the city. Fans of nature aren't disappointed with the amount of natural beauty that the city has to offer including the forests at Riis Skov and Marselisborg. The city also has a large deer park where you can observe those beautiful creatures in their natural setting. All in all, Aarhus is a beautiful city with several historic monuments and natural beauty to absorb!
