7.1.11. AT&T Park

AT&T Park is a baseball park located in the South Beach neighborhood of San Francisco, California. Since 2000, it has served as the home of the San Francisco Giants, the city's Major League Baseball (MLB) franchise. It is highly recommended that you visit this place during the bay area science festival, if possible, since the entire stadium is converted into a massive array of free science exhibits and activities then. This is an excellent baseball stadium and the atmosphere created during matches is unbeatable. Even if you know nothing about home runs and fly balls, seeing a game at AT&T Park is a fun and quintessentially San Francisco experience. Set on the docks of San Francisco Bay, the park affords fabulous views of the waterfront, with kayakers and paddleboarders chasing each other to retrieve “splash hits” over the right-field fence. In true SF style, AT&T offers some of the best ballpark fare in the country—everything from Caribbean Cha Cha bowls (grilled marinated chicken over black beans, rice, zucchini and carrots, with various toppings) and garlic fries to grilled crab sandwiches, Tony's Neapolitan pizza, and Ghirardelli chocolate sundaes. There's also an onsite gastropub with a local-centric beer selection and an outpost of James Beard Award–winning chef Traci Des Jardins' taqueria, Mijita. With two World Series championships under their bats since 2010, SF Giants games are usually sell-outs, but tickets are almost always available

7.2.10. PIER 39

Pier 39 is a shopping center including shops, restaurants, a video arcade, street performances, the Aquarium of the Bay, virtual 3D rides, and views of California sea lions hauled out on docks on Pier 39's marina. Just as North Beach is known for its pasta, PIER 39 is famous for its seafood. Home to 14 full-service restaurants, PIER 39 is known for serving up some of the freshest and most-delicious dishes. The allure of Pier 39 can't be denied despite the fact that many locals avoid the Fisherman's Wharf area. The complex has street performers, restaurants, shops, attractions, best views of the sea lions, and a five-acre waterfront park that has a 300 berth marina. Pier 39 is the place to go for the annual Tulipmania every February. Members of the landscaping team give free tour throughout the week, with refreshments at the end. Street performers are multi-talented tricksters, magicians, jugglers and comedians who entertain PIER 39 visitors daily at the Crystal Geyser ALPINE SPRING WATER Stage. Guests marvel as these zany performers bring laughter and cheer to thousands! Shows are weather-permitting and free to the public. Come try Frequent Flyers - a fun-filled bungee trampoline for all ages. Participants can safely jump up to 20 feet in the air and try their hand at some aerial acrobatics. Jumpers must be at least 30 pounds and under 230 pounds. Experience amazing fun for the whole family at Magowan's Infinite Mirror Maze! Challenge yourself to find your way through the infinite hallways, endless circles and dead-ends of the most fascinating maze in San Francisco. Make your own music on PIER 39's Musical Stairs, the interactive art exhibit presented by Artist Remo Saraceni, creator of the floor piano in the Tom Hank's movie Big. To enjoy the music, please take a walk up (or down) these magical stairs. The San Francisco Carousel, handcrafted in Italy, is intricately hand-painted and depicts famous San Francisco landmarks, including the Golden Gate Bridge, Coit Tower, Chinatown, Lombard Street, Alcatraz and the popular California sea lions at PIER 39. It is the only carousel in the country that has artistic renderings of its home city. The sea lions camped out in PIER 39's West Marina have been endearingly coined, "Sea Lebrities." These boisterous barking pinnipeds started arriving in droves, taking over the docks in January 1990 shortly after the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake. At first they numbered from 10-50, but due to a plentiful herring supply, available dock space and the marina's protected environment, the population grew to more than 300 within a few months. Each winter, the population can increase up to 900 sea lions, most of which are male. During the summer months, the sea lions migrate south to the Channel Islands for breeding season, but in recent years a small group stays year-round at PIER 39's K-Dock.

7.2.28. Presidio

Presidio is a former military base in San Francisco peninsula's north tip. It encompasses the rugged Marshall's Beach and the cozy Baker Beach as well as the forest that was planted by the army in the late nineteenth and early twentieth century. The site is always open on Saturdays, and Sundays from 10 am to 4 pm with an additional hour during weekdays by appointment. They may also charge an admission fee. The Presidio was used at different points in its 230-year history to house soldiers from Spain and Mexico before it became a U.S. military base. Its armed past notwithstanding, you won't find a more bucolic spot in the city, thanks to its abundant eucalyptus trees and yawning lawns. If, at this point, you want to fortify yourself with a cocktail or dinner, a great place for both is the Presidio Social Club, an urban hipster kind of a joint, which was once an enlisted-mens' barracks. The Presidio has a rich history spanning back to the time of the native Ohlone people. The Spanish arrived in 1776 to establish the northernmost outpost of their empire in western North America. The Presidio fell under Mexican rule for 24 years before the U.S. Army took control in 1846. Over 148 years, the U.S. Army transformed the Presidio grounds from mostly windswept dunes and scrub to a verdant, preeminent military post. In 1962, the Presidio was designated a National Historic Landmark and the site has been part of the Golden Gate National Recreation Area since 1994. Learn of the people that lived here, and stories of how they interacted with places around the Presidio and the world. Or you may want to explore our collections of military objects and structures,

7.2.30. Chinatown

As old as San Francisco itself, Chinatown is the second-largest Asian community in North America. Perennially popular, it's both a legitimate dining destination and a wonderland of interesting sights. If there's a trick to enjoying it fully, however, it's to recognize that there are actually two Chinatowns centered on parallel blocks: Grant Avenue (for tourists) and Stockton Street (for locals). Hilly and full of alleys, Chinatown rewards the curious wanderer. Get a taste of San Francisco's Chinatown with this one-day itinerary filled with food, history, shopping and more. Present-day Chinatown is a square mile in the center of the city boasting a diverse mix of housing, temples, shops, markets, bakeries and more serving the local Chinese community—including some of the best things to do in San Francisco. And while eating at the best Chinese restaurants and shopping for hours are undoubtedly part of the draw and experience of the place, crowded, chaotic and compact, Chinatown contains some impressive historic sites and is undoubtedly one of the most densely packed cultural areas in the city. Crowded, chaotic and compact, San Francisco's Chinatown is a feast for the senses. Enter on Grant Avenue near Bush Street through the ornate Chinatown Gate with its carved foo dogs (to ward off evil spirits) and browse the souvenir stops along Grant Avenue for kitschy trinkets and imports. Then head to Stockton Street for a taste of the real, working Chinatown, where residents shop for ginseng and herbal remedies, dried fish parts and delicacies such as live quail and water eels. For a glimpse of pre-20th century Chinatown, walk up the narrow stairs to the Tien Hau Temple (125 Waverly Pl) above Grant Avenue, on the alley known as the Street of Painted Balconies. Purportedly the oldest Taoist temple in the U.S. (circa 1852), it's festooned with gold paper lanterns, calligraphy, incense, hundreds of candles and miniature shrines featuring photos of departed loved ones. Stop for a bite at one of innumerable eateries, including Yuet Lee for superb seafood, House of Nanking (919 Kearny St between Jackson St and Pacific Ave, houseofnanking.net) for Shanghai-style cooking and R&G Lounge (631 Kearny St between Clay and Commercial Sts, 415-982-7877) for specialties such as salt-and-pepper crab. Don't miss the Golden Gate Fortune Cookie Factory (56 Ross Alley, 415-781-3956), where some 20,000 fortune cookies are made every day—folded by hand as they come off an ancient-looking cookie conveyor belt.

7.2.33. Painted Ladies

Historical row of Victorian houses well-known for appearances on movies, TV shows & postcards. Don't forget your camera: historic Alamo Square offers quintessential scenes of the City, including the famous 'Painted Ladies' of Postcard Row. This photogenic hilltop has appeared in numerous TV and film productions, such as the sitcom 'Full House.' Fame aside, the abundant lawns, flowerbeds and willows have made this park a well-loved play space for generations. Youngsters flock to the dual-level playground, while the off-leash area is popular with dogs (and dog parents). Look for the unusual Shoe Garden, where castoff high heels and ski boots are repurposed as landscape art. Full tennis court, walking trails and picnic area. The famous "Painted Ladies of San Francisco", otherwise known as "Postcard Row" or the "Seven Sisters", are a row of colorful Victorian houses located at 710–720 Steiner Street, across from Alamo Square in the neighborhood of Haight Ashbury. These Queen Anne-style homes are one of the thousands built in San Francisco during its booming growth at the end of the 19th-century. Their brightly colored edifices have become a pop culture staple, and are one of the most well-recognized examples of California Victorian architecture. One of the most photographed locations in San Francisco, Alamo Square's famous "postcard row" at Hayes and Steiner Streets is indeed a visual treat. A tight, escalating formation of Victorian houses is back-dropped by downtown skyscrapers, providing a stunning contrast. The grassy square itself is an ideal midday break. One of 11 historic districts designated by the Department of City Planning, the area includes several bed and breakfast inns. The Painted Ladies are an iconic site in San Francisco you cannot miss, just like our walking tours! San Francisco is known for sweeping viewpoints, gorgeous architecture, and overall being an aesthetically pleasing place to visit. Encapsulated in this description fit the "Painted Ladies", also known as the "Seven Sisters." A row of archetypal Victorian homes from the 1890's climbing one of San Francisco's many hills, visitors come from far and wide to photograph these beautiful structures.

13. Transportation cost

San Francisco is quite a compact city comprising of an extensive public transportation network which makes getting or moving around without a car as a preferred method of seeing the city. The San Francisco Bay Area doesn't have an integrated transit system, hence you may use services operated by several agencies during your visit. If you are within San Francisco, you can call 311 any time from your phone and speak with a live operator on information about Muni and other bus services in the city. The primary transit operator within the San Francisco area is known as Muni. Muni has an extensive network of bus, streetcar, cable car, and trolleybuses serving every tourist destination, initial neighborhood, and shopping district located within the city limits. You can check for schedules and route maps online. You can also purchase system maps at selected retail locations. Most of the bus stops have posted system maps that you may also use. Busy stops across the transit system have electronic NextBus displays which announce real-time arrival. Muni has 1-day, 3-day, and 7-day visitor passports going for $ 20, $ 31, $ 40 respectively. With these passports, you can access or rather have unlimited rides on the buses, streetcars, trolley buses, and cable cars for the days subscribed for. Important to note is that you need to use the passports for subsequent days. These passports offer convenience, but your trip should include some cable car riding for you to be given any meaningful discount. One-way fare (Cable car) is $ 7 for all ages except for seniors and persons with disabilities who pay $ 3. Visit <https://www.sfmta.com/getting-around/transit/fares-passes/visitor-day-passes> for more information. Don't be surprised when buses come late or even do not show at all. Muni service is unreliable. Most of its vehicles are usually very crowded and you'll see drivers and the passengers often indifferent to each other. San Francisco has ferry services with several lines offering a scenic, practical way for venturing out of the city. The famous tourist destinations are Alcatraz and Sausalito. There are additional ferries to Angel Island, Vallejo, Larkspur, Tiburon, Oakland, and Alameda. You can use other transit operators which operate from San Francisco to various points in the Bay Area. They include the AC Transit bus service available to and from the East Bay, the Golden Gate Transit service available to and from the North Bay, and the San Trans bus service available to and from Peninsula. PresdiGo shuttle service is also available from downtown San Francisco to Presidio. When it comes to parking, rates range from $ 20 to $ 50 per day. It depends with the location. That's quite expensive. Isn't it? You won't need a car until you are ready to explore the outside of the city. Visit www.sfcарfree.org for information about car - free travelling in San Francisco. Taxis can be found throughout San Francisco though they are relatively expensive. Cab fares start from $ 3.5 with an additional $ 2.75 for each mile travelled (Billed in 1/5 mile increments at $ 0.55), the waiting time rate is $ 0.55 per minute, and a subcharge of $ 2.00 applies for trips from the San Francisco International Airport.
