4. History

Athens has been inhabited for the past 7000 years. They went into an economic decline very early off into their establishment. Even in that age and time, Athens was a major centre of trade mainly because of its central position in the country. Since the city had a large number of schools, it was given the status of a free city. Later, a library, gymnasium, several temples and bridges were constructed. The most famous of all was the aqueduct which is still in use today. Athens was selected as the capital city of independent Greece in 1834. It is after World War II, that the population in this city exploded. The city had to face obstacles in its course of development like smog, over population and congestion and lack of free space. But the city took measures against it and became more functional.

Index*5. Cultural identity

The Greece history forms an integral part of the culture in Athens. This city is the hub of archaeological research conducted throughout the world. To facilitate this, there are many libraries, laboratories and colleges set up as well as museums to display their findings. Research is conducted here on a daily basis. Museums in Athens are a major attraction here. Their construction alone attracts a huge crowd. The National Archaeological Museum, Numismatic Museum, Museum of Cycladic Art and the New Acropolis Museum are just a few of them. The city is a major supporter of performing arts and has a lot of open theatres, concert halls, theatrical stages and other music venues.

Index*6. Natural resources

Athens has a lot of natural resources in store. There are many mineral deposits of marble, coal, nickel, bauxite, chromate, etc. The country as a whole has limestone type of soil. It is not very fertile which is why they have restrictions in the types of plants they grow. They are mainly a wine – growing region. The plants grown in and around Athens include olive, wheat, tomatoes, potatoes, etc.

13. Transportation hubs

The major airport in Athens is the Athens International Airport (37.935630, 23.948426). It is just 35 km away from the city towards the east. You can get to the city by taking the Metro Line 3. The Suburban Rail connects the airport to the Athens Central Railway Station (37.991976, 23.721092), Port of Piraeus (37.943418, 23.638241) and Kaito. There are also buses available between Exits 4 and 5. There are also KTEL Regional buses between Exits 2 and 3. Athens offers two alternatives as far as railway commuting is concerned. There is the metro with 3 lines namely the red line, blue line and green line. Then there is the suburban rail. The Athens Railway Station is served by both these train types. This railway station is divided into 2 terminals called the Larissa Station and the Peloponnese Station. The Port of Piraeus is the major port near the city. You can visit many Greek islands from this port. Other ports here include Port Rafina (38.022045, 24.008516) and Port Lavrion (37.940656, 23.633333). There are two major bus terminals in the city namely the Kifissos Bus Terminal A (37.998207, 23.698956) and the Liosion Bus Terminal B (38.009292, 23.721615). The KTEL buses ply between them.

14. Transportation cost

Cost of travelling by public transport is pretty cheap. One way tickets for buses or trains will cost you 1.40 €. Taxis start at 3 € and they then charge less than a euro for every kilometre. Tourists can get special 3-day tickets for 22 €. If you are planning to stay in the city for a while, or are going to use the public transport a lot, then getting a monthly pass is much preferred. It will only cost you about 30 €. KTEL bus tickets to the airport will be 6 € and metro tickets will 10 €. Nice cabins for two people in ferries should cost you about 120 €.

15. Baggage allowance

If you are planning to travel to Athens with a lot of luggage, it is better to opt for a taxi. Taxi drivers do charge you for the luggage you keep in the trunk. It will be about € 0.40 per bag. You can also opt for the bus or the train. They have provisions for carrying luggage too.

Index*18. Average meal cost

Food expenses are cheap in Athens. So you need not worry about holding back on tasting the amazing cuisine. A regular meal at a restaurant will be around 12 € and can go up to 35 €. Domestic beer (0.5 litres) costs about 3.50 €, whereas an imported beer (0.33 litres) will cost you about 4 €. A 0.33 litres bottle of water will be 0.50 €.

19. Shopping

Greeks love the idea of shopping in one place. Thus many malls have been set up and developed around the country for many decades. Many malls are found in the capital itself. Athens Capitol (37.991462, 23.729833) is a mega complex with an array of stores, leisure outlets, museum, auditorium and a courtyard right in its centre. The Athens Heart (37.969619, 23.700887) is another mega mall with over 80 brands to choose from. A more recent choice for shoppers is the Athens Metro Mall (37.939437, 23.740351) that is opened right beside the Dimitrios Metro Station. It too has over 80 brands, and several eateries, play areas, cinema screens and supermarkets. Other malls include the Avenue (38.035377, 23.796139), Attica (37.977615, 23.734979) and McArthurGlen (37.986081, 23.910238). Tourists looking forward to some Greek street shopping, they can visit places like Plaka and Monastiraki (37.976218, 23.724578). Ermou Street (37.976899, 23.724457), Athinas Street (37.976688, 23.726162) and the Aiolou (37.978787, 23.728074) are other well known shopping areas. Shopping here will get you some really unique things at a great cost.

20. Tourist benefits

Tourists shopping in Athens can get their VAT refunded at the airport. But there are certain regulations to this. You have to look out for stores with the 'Global Blue Tax Free Shopping'. Ask for the Tax Free forms and fill it completely. Then you can refund your taxes at the airport customs before check-in. Just make sure that your products are unused and sealed and carry them with you instead of checking it in with your luggage. Athens has also started the Athens Spotlighted, a city discount card. You can get it for free from the Central Information Counter near the arrivals. A number of participating restaurants and venues offer discounts to people. These discounts can be around 15% - 20%.

21. Essential local apps

There are a few apps that will help you get around the city. Apps like Athens Transportation, Athens Next Bus and Athens Metro are some free apps that simplify the transport system of the capital city. They display the schedule, stops and the incoming trains and buses at each station. They even display information about the delays. Athens APK is an audio pocket guide. It will lead you through the quaint streets and into hotels and cafes that are hidden away. There are also the more mainstream apps like GoogleMaps and GreekGuide that will show you the map of Athens and allow you to navigate hassle – free.

22. Driving

Tourists and travellers staying in Athens for a short time (less than 6 months) will need a license from your home nation if you decide to drive. Your license should be legal and valid. You should also carry an International Driving Permit issued by a legalised authority. People planning to be here for more than six months need to convert their home license into Greek licenses. When renting cars in Athens, make sure it has all the papers that is required. If caught with incorrect documents, you can be fined.

23. Travel essentials

It is always suggested to make a checklist before you leave for a vacation. This makes the entire trip hassle free. Make sure to always keep your phone battery charged. You will always need it in a foreign country. Athens can get very sunny and hot at times. It is thus advised to carry sun protection, sunglasses and any other medication if you might need. Electric voltage in Athens and entire Greece is 230 volts. Electric plugs are the usual Europlug or the Schuko.

Conclusion – Why to select this destination

Athens is the capital city of Greece. But it was a major city during ancient times. This city is every historian's and archaeologist's dream. The city offers a rich heritage and we see its remains and effects even today. Today, we see a unique blend of old and new in this city. The ancient ruins that are preserved for tourists, stands in stark contrast against the modern developments in the city. The city has grown up to be a big metropolitan area with its many roads and shopping areas and other amenities. Even between all the technological developments, the city has not lost its old world charm. With its light buildings and cobblestone paths, the city looks like a part of the fantasy. Every street here has something to offer in terms of culture and history. The major attraction of this capital city has to be its ruins. The things and structures found here rivals all the history in the world. The weather, though hot, just adds to the feel of the city. The people here are loud and polite. They are very affectionate and helpful. It is a city that looks beautiful during the day and even more beautiful at night.
