2. Neighbouring cities/countries

The Town Of Cusco Lies 297kms Away From Juliaca, Followed By Arequipa At A Distance Of 324Kms, Huancayo At 387kms, Písac At 35Kms, Coya At 43Kms And Lamay At 45Kms.

3. Significance

When you step your foot on the grounds of one of the world's most visited and touristy destination, prepare yourself to walk through the streets dominated by Spanish and Inca cultures making this old-school-modern city rather a fascinating one. Not letting go of its Andean roots, the city of Cusco has mixed up with the Spanish colonies only to repackage themselves as Peru's ultimate destination. Lost in the magnificent colonial architecture, countryside villages and historic Inca ruins the city throws you into the history books of the region to learn a lesson or two with its many museums, archaeological sites and monuments. A classified cultural heritage, Cusco loses itself into Amazon lowlands and orchid rich cloud forests, where the Sacred Valley awaits you. With growing number of visitors every year, the city doesn't fail to surprise anybody with its gorgeous views and appealing environment that goes with the historic pre-colombian ruins. The city enjoys a subtropical highland climate, it was declared as a World Heritage Site by UNESCO.

4. History

The history of this town goes back to 3000 years ago with the people of Killke culture occupying the region from 900 to 1200. However soon the region was occupied by the Incas in the 13th century making the city of Cusco a prominent center for Inca Empire. Under the Incan empire the city flourished, however according to a legend the city was rebuilt from a sleepy state into a massive empire of Tawantinsuyu. By 1532 the city was captured by the generals of Atahualpa in the Battle of Quipaipan, however the glory didn't last long due to the Spanish invasion. It was in the year 1533 that the first three Spaniards stepped into the city and gained control over Cusco. The then capital of Inca flourished during the time with construction of many streets and many architectural buildings with both Spanish and Inca indigenous architecture. However in this process many of Inca temples, buildings and palaces were destroyed. The city further on went on to become a center of the Spanish colonization and Christianity was spread in the Andean world along with mining, agricultural, cattle raising boosting the economy of the state. The city flourished throughout the 19th and 20th century, however with a destructive earthquake in the 1950, it faced a setback with one third of the city's architecture going haywire. It was in 1983 that the city was declared as a World Heritage Site. The city was established and by 1990s tourism increased making Cusco one of the most important destinations of the country.

5. Cultural identity

The culture of the country is defined by its many customs, beliefs and way of life that has been influenced by the Spanish conquistadors and the native Incas. However it doesn't limit itself to these cultures since many Immigrant groups like Chinese, Europeans, Africans and Japanese also contribute to the society. Peruvian culture can be seen through literature, dance, art forms, music, dance, celebrations, clothing, religion and clothing. Cusco is recognized as a cultural capital, the culture of lies in its historic traditions, customs and people who hail from the Inca culture till date. The folklore of the city is as diverse and rich as it can get with various types of dances ranging from Qollas, Danza de Los Negritos, el Panadero, Saqra K'achampa among others. What also defines the culture is the endless joys, colours, kindness found in the streets of the city. The popular art of the region is incomparable along with exquisite textiles that hails from the region. Boasting of the most varied crafts in the world, Peru shows an extensive amount of traditional exhibit. The diversity lies in its creativity, multi functionality and colourfulness. The country's folklore is rich and diverse at the same time with its own type of dances and songs with Zamacueca, Festejo and El Huayno being some of the popular dances. The music in the country is an amalgamation of sounds and tunes influences by Spanish, Quechua and Aymara music. The traditional cuisines in the country gets its combination from the Spanish and Inca culture and is seen in all the meals, also influencing are African and Chinese cultures that have shaped up the food scene of the country. All in all, Peru is full of customs that maintain the legacy of its ancient cultures.
